

Yemi S. Kuku

CALIFORNIA

Yemi S. Kuku Jr. is a 24 year old activist and entrepreneur. Residing in Los Angeles, California, Yemi first joined the NAACP during his undergraduate years at California State University, Northridge where he double majored in Political Science & Pan African Studies. While attending Northridge, Yemi served in various capacities, including Vice-President, Chapter President, and State Conference Youth & College Political Action Chair, among others.

Now in preparation for law school, Kuku currently serves as a member of the National Board of Directors for Region I. Believing that “every person has a purpose,” Yemi has dedicated himself to the cause of social justice and working to help others discover their calling. His commitment to the Association was fostered in part by his Nigerian upbringing and, in addition to serving on the Board; he is also a campus minister on staff with InterVarsity Christian Fellowship, as well as the owner of RightLobe Media, a design company based out of Los Angeles, CA.
